● Introduction

Established in 1956, the NTNU Graduate Institute of English was the first of its kind in Taiwan. In 1996, the Graduate Institute merged with the Department of English as a single teaching and research unit, offering B.A, M.A and Ph. D. programs. The M.A and Ph. D programs are divided into three tracks: Literature, Linguistics and TESOL, all of which aim to develop research skills and train research-oriented college instructors and scholars in these fields.

● Research Fields

NTNU English graduates are recognized throughout Taiwan for excellence in TESOL, linguistics and literature teaching and research. About 70% of our graduates serve as teachers, 14% continue on to advanced studies and the rest enter professions that require a good command of English. It is our goal that all NTNU English Department graduates prove not only superior teachers of English, but indeed masters of the language and culture. We aspire for students to live up to the NTNU English Department motto:

NTNU English majors, English masters.
