Department of Education

- Degree Offered
  - Bachelor Programs
  - Master’s Programs
  - Doctoral Programs

- Introduction
  The Department of Education was among the first seven departments established with the founding of National Taiwan Normal University in 1946. It remains the oldest and most prestigious school of education in Taiwan. The program of masters in education started in 1955, and the doctoral program started in 1971. The Department and the graduate institute were combined according to law in 1994, named as Department of Education.

- Research Fields
  The mission of the Department is to cultivate the top talents for educational research and practices. They are encouraged to undertake systematic studies in Eastern and Western philosophies of education, administration; sociology of education, and educational policy & curriculum & instruction. The major goals of the Department are to bring up teachers of secondary school, school and educational administrators and education researchers.

  The Department of Education has the largest and most prestigious faculty body out of any department of education in Taiwan. More than half of the faculty members have obtained degrees internationally and many consistently publish articles in research journals of international renown. In addition, many faculty members serve as heads or influential members of public and private educational research associations and as influential members of government assemblies and departments that set educational policy.

- Graduation Requirements
  - Course duration (per semester): at least 2 semesters
  - The requirements for graduation: 32 credits (master degree)
    36 credits (doctor degree)
  - Required courses: Research Practices of Education and Social Sciences (for master degree)

- Languages of Instruction
  - English
  - Chinese
  - Other:

Contact information
Tel: 886-2-7734-3880 / Ms. Chi
Website: http://www.ed.ntnu.edu.tw/
E-mail: shufen@ntnu.edu.tw